Improving lives and communities through comprehensive addiction treatment

Why NACATS Exists

Comprehensive, high-quality addiction treatment services are too often undermined by payer and governmental policies that fail to provide the resources required to achieve essential outcomes. If left uncorrected, many NACATS members have no choice but to reduce services or close clinics, limiting critical access to care when overdoses continue to claim more than 100,000 lives each year in the U.S. Therefore, NACATS aims to:

1. Advocate for rational, consistent reimbursement models that ensure the stability and sustainability of comprehensive treatment services
2. Promote the adoption of standardized, American Society for Addiction Medicine (ASAM)-informed, evidence-based service packages that incorporate medication, behavioral health support, and social services
3. Establish universally recognized metrics for measuring the quality and effectiveness of addiction treatment, centered on transparency and accountability for patient outcomes

All of these will result in expanded access to appropriate care where more patients' lives will be saved, societal costs will be reduced, and communities will benefit.

We are committed to working collaboratively with policymakers, payers and other stakeholders to implement lasting solutions that result in measurable, tangible high-quality outcomes. We hope to protect access to and expand the lifesaving, comprehensive care that is critical for the health and well-being of individuals, families and communities in the face of the ongoing addiction crisis.

Our Proposed Solutions

To address the systemic challenges facing comprehensive addiction treatment, NACATS is committed to advocating for the following solutions in collaboration with policymakers, payers, and other stakeholders:

1. Establish Consistent, Rational Reimbursement Models

- Work with payers to implement standardized reimbursement methodologies, such as bundled payments, case rates, or dedicated billing codes
- Ensure sufficient reimbursement levels for providers to deliver high-quality, comprehensive care and remain financially viable

2. Promote Standardized, Evidence-Informed Service Packages

- Adopt evidence-based service models that integrate medication, treatment, and social support services as defined by industry standards like ASAM
- Inform policies and regulations that facilitate patient access to the full continuum of addiction care based on individualized clinical needs

3. Develop and Share Quality and Performance Metrics

- Establish a core set of standardized metrics for evaluating the quality and effectiveness of comprehensive addiction treatment
- Demonstrate greater transparency through self-publishing patient outcomes and provider performance metrics to drive accountability and improvement
- Invest in research to build the evidence base for comprehensive addiction treatment and inform refinement of best practices

By advancing these solutions, NACATS aims to foster a more stable, sustainable ecosystem for comprehensive addiction treatment - one that expands access to affordable, accountable, patient-centered care for the millions of Americans struggling with substance use disorders.
