About the Show

Where power meets perspective and politics gets real.

Politics con Acento is the essential digital-first bilingual show and video podcast for the Latino voting community. Hosted by Entravision's established White House Correspondent, Stephanie Ochoa, this reimagined show with broader reach distribution provides real substance on the policies and political trends that profoundly shape Latino lives, jobs, and futures. It is not a conventional political show. Our mission is to inform, empower, and mobilize Latino voters through content they truly connect with, inspiring them to voice their vote. Each weekly, one hour episode will air across Entravision's TV, digital, and social media platforms, featuring exclusive one-on-one interviews with prominent political figures, analysts, and community leaders. Our goal is simple: through our vast reach and trust, bridge diverse perspectives and bring Washington's decisions closer to Latino communities.

About the Host

Stephanie Ochoa is a Mexican journalist serving as a White House News correspondent for Entravision based in Washington, D.C. With more than a decade of experience covering social and political issues across Mexico, Spain, and the United States, she is a trusted bilingual voice in national media. Through her reporting, she hopes to bridge diverse perspectives. "My passion for politics is fueled by the power it has to shape real lives, especially within the Latino community. Politics decides who gets access, who gets heard, and who gets left out. As a journalist and immigrant voice in Washington, I feel a responsibility to make that world more accessible, to translate policy into stories that matter to our families, our jobs, and our future," said Ochoa. Recognized with the 2024 Foreign Press Excellence Award, a Capital Emmy, and the "Emerging Leader" honor by the Washington Academy of Political Arts and Sciences, Ochoa uses media and her accent to highlight the power of representation and informed civic participation.
